Historical Note

In the early 1950s the Continental Development Foundation was established by a group of young engineers and businessmen. In the summer of 1952, the Foundation, with the cooperation of the China Institute in America, launched its First Annual Project Suggestion Contest which was directed to Chinese scholars and businessmen and posed the question "What can we do here that would be of permanent value in the reconstruction of future China?"

Forty-three essays were submitted, and on November 1, 1952 the first prize of $300.00 was awarded to Dr. Shiu-ying Hu of the Arnold Arboretum for her essay "The Problem of the Preparation of a Flora of China." In support of her application, Karl Sax, Arboretum director 1946-1954, described her as "one of the most competent and industrious students I have ever known" ¹

The Foundation presented the project to the Trustees of China International Foundation which provided funding for the project. In April 1953, Harvard, and in collaboration with the Arnold Arboretum under the directorship of Karl Sax, accepted the offer of the China International Foundation to finance the undertaking and the project began in July.

In July, 1953, under the directorship of Richard A. Howard, Hu became an Arnold Arboretum Research Associate devoting her full time to the Flora of China Project. In addition to Hu, others that worked on the project at the Arnold Arboretum included: Dr. Richard Howard provided overall guidance, Dr. Yu-Chen Ting, Dr. Su-Ying Liu, and Dr. Ding Hou. Stella Whitehouse, the Administrative Secretary of the Arboretum and Margaret Lafavour and Norma Hurley were technical typists.

Professor Hu graduated from Ginling College in Nanking in 1933 then attended Lingnan University in Canton (formerly Canton Christian College) as a graduate student in botany, with an assistantship in the herbarium. She received her Master of Science degree from Lingnan University in 1937. Because of the war with Japan, Lingnan University relocated to Chengdu, where West China Union University, also a missionary college, became host to several refugee colleges. Hu had conducted fieldwork in western Sichuan in the late 1930s and early 1940s, at a time when only a few men (notably, Armand David, Joseph Rock, and E Wilson) had explored that region. At West China Union University continued her field studies and taught courses in botany and was also elected president of the International Women's Club. The vice president of the club was a Radcliffe graduate, and applied to her alma mater for a fellowship for Hu.

In 1946, she was offered a graduate fellowship for a doctorate program at Radcliffe College under Professor E. D. Merrill, then Director of the Arnold Arboretum. Her doctoral dissertation on the genus Ilex (Aquifoliaceae) was carried out at the Arnold Arboretum under the direction of E. D. Merrill, director of the Arboretum 1935-1946. After obtaining her degree in 1949 she became a herbarium assistant at the Arboretum. By the time Dr. Hu obtained her doctorate, just three years after her arrival, she began an account of the flora of China.²

The project was to be completed in three stages: a compilation of an index to the Chinese flora; the publication of an enumeration of the flora of China; and the preparation of the flora by families with descriptions, keys, citations of important literature and specimens examined. Although much progress was made in three and a half years, especially in the creation of an index of the published records and older literature searches, in January, 1957 Richard A. Howard, Director of the Arboretum, determined that the possibility of securing long-range financial backing necessary for the enormous undertaking of the completion of a comprehensive flora was unlikely and the project was terminated.

Although Hu officially retired from the Arnold Arboretum on June 30, 1976 she continued writing floristic treatments, serving as hostess to Chinese visiting scholars, sharing her broad knowledge of the plant world and her famous Chinese dinners with staff and students alike. In 1992, the Holly Society of America established The Shiu-ying Hu Award to honor Dr. Hu for her lifetime study of the taxonomy of the genus Ilex. Dr. Hu was the first recipient of the award. In 2008, Hu was the first recipient of the American Botanical Council Lifetime Achievement Award. As Honorary Professor of Chinese Medicine at The Chinese University of Hong Kong, Senior College Tutor of

Chung Chi College and Emeritus Senior Research Fellow of Arnold Arboretum, Harvard University in 2000, Harvard Papers in Botany Vol. 5, No. 1 was dedicated to Dr. Hu and on February 19, 2000 she was honored at the Chinese University of Hong Kong, with a special symposium and birthday celebration Sponsored by the Ma Man Fai Chinese Medicine Education Foundation Fund. ³

Chi-wu Wang's (1913-1987) Prospectus for the Chinese Flora Project was produced while he was at the Harvard Forest in 1953. Born Tientsin, China, and educated at National Tsing-Hua University, Chi-wu Wang received his MS from Yale in 1947. Wang was a Research Assistant at the Fan Memorial Biological Institute from 1933-1943, and Associate Professor at National Kwangsi University, 1943-1946. Beginning in 1947, he was a graduate student in biology at Harvard receiving his PhD from the Department of Biology in 1953.

While working on his dissertation, Wang worked as a half-time research associate for two years at the Harvard Forest under the general supervision of Hugh M. Raup, Harvard Forest Director. In February, 1953 he became a full-time research associate at the Forest. In 1954, Wang left Harvard to take a position as Interim Assistant Professor, later Associate Professor of Forestry, of Forest Genetics at the University of Florida where he assisted Thomas O. Perry in organizing the first ever University/Industry Research Cooperative in Forest Genetics at the University of Florida

School of Forest Resources and Conservation (SFRC). In 1959, Wang was at the University of Minnesota and working part of the year at the University of Florida. Beginning in 1960, he held concurrent positions as Professor of Forest Genetics at the University of Idaho and as a Research Associate at the School of Forestry, University of Minnesota. In 1961 "The Forest in China" based on his thesis; "The Forest Vegetation of Continental Eastern Asia and its Development" was published by Harvard University as Maria Moors Cabot Foundation Publications No.5.
